Can you name the books of the New Testament backwards? Can you even name them beginning at the first and going through to the last?

The children of the Daily Vacation Bible School named them both ways last night. They not only named those of the New Testament but those of the old as well. They began at Genesis and went through to Revelations and then they began at Revelations and went clear back to Genesis. Not only could they give the names of the books but they could tell something about what was in each of them.

The second session of the Daily-Vacation Bible School closed at Maryville High School auditorium last night with a program demonstrating the work that had been done in the school. Many parents of the children and other people from town attended.

The average attendance of the school this summer has been about 100 a day and the total enrollment was 117. The pupils ranged in age from 4 to 12 years. The school was prepared to take care of those up to 14 years old.

The program last night opened with the children marching in singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." They then sang "This is My Father's World" and gave the Bible salute. The Rev. R. E. Snodgrass then led in prayer.

A regular daily program was put on by the children, under the direction of the Rev. S. P. Allison. They told things regarding the Bible which about 99 per cent of the older people who were present could not tell.

A dramatized sketch of the story of the healing of the lame man was put on and a number of folk drills were given by the younger pupils. The teachers and helpers in the various departments had charge of the children in these demonstrations.

At the close of the program the visitors were invited to look over the hand work that had been done by the pupils. The little girls had made aprons, little dress, handkerchiefs and dolls and the boys had made many kind of animals.

The hand work of the boys had been in charge of the Rev. B. F. Cline, pastor of the Buchanan Street Methodist, who did the designing. The boys made, under his direction, about every kind of an animal from a giraffe to pig.

One of the features of the program last night was a Bible contest between ten children, five on a side. The Rev. Mr. Allison asked questions and those who could not answer had to sit down. Noreen White won first place in this contest and Junior Hellmers won second.

The Rev. Mr. Allison has managed the school and it is due to him that it has been carried on. He has been ably by a number of others.

This is the second year for the school. Last year it was held in the Presbyterian Church. It has been such a success that it has been decided to make it an annual affair. Although all workers at the school gave their services free of charge a fund will be needed for carrying it on next year. In order to raise this fund contributions are being taken by the treasurer, Miss Hazel Sheridan, at the First National Bank. Those who think that the school is a good thing and that it has done a good work may, if they care to, make a contribution to Miss Sheridan and the money will be ready for next year.

A number of the pupils were neither tardy or absent during the 4-weeks term. They are the following:

Sarah Ellen Seiler, Mary Elizabeth Henderson, Laura Warner, Mary Frances Lasell, Lela Maul, Eloise Curi, Chlorine Noland, Viola Henderson, Eleanor Nicholas, Nellie Marian Smith, Mildred Jackson, Dorothy May Henderson, Elizabeth DeMoss, Betty Hellmers, Genevieve Miller, Elizabeth Edwards, Virginia Bennett, Noreen White, Ruth Hammond, Charlotte Smith, Paul Person, Dale Everhart, Frances Walker, Junior Hellmers, William Stowell, Templeton Walker, William Person.

RURAL SCHOOLSDR. E. A. WINSHIP BELIEVES
THEY ARE A NUISANCE

SAYS KEEP RURAL SPIRIT

Is Pleased With Program Made by
Schools of the Nation—likes
Work Done Here

A consolidated school is a good thing if the rural spirit is kept in it but otherwise it is a nuisance. Make a consolidated school "citified" and you ruin it.

This is a statement made yesterday at the Garrett School by Dr. E. A. Winship of Boston, editor of the Journal of Education.

Dr. Winship is strong for keeping the identity of the rural school and community and for rural centers. He said that the Maryville Chamber of Commerce was the first in the country to take up rural work from the standpoint of a rural center organization. He complimented the Chamber highly for the work that it has done. He told of his first visit to Nodaway County and his trip to Ottwell School, of which Miss Nellie Halasey was teacher, Bert Cooper, who was county superintendent at that time. He told of a wonderful lunch that was served him at the school on a cold day and complimented the schools of the county for their work along this line.

Dr. Winship is highly pleased with the progress that the schools of the nation are making. He said that within another year most of the 1-room schools will have 8-months terms although only a few years ago most of them had only five or six months a year. He spoke also of the qualifications of teachers, telling that 85 per cent of the teachers of North Carolina attend summer school in order that they may become certified. A certified teacher is entitled to a salary of $1,200 a year in that state, which those not certified cannot draw.

In his talk Dr. Winship mentioned Miss Grace M. Shepherd and complimented the College on having such an efficient helper on its force in rural work. He said that he had known Miss Shepherd as a county superintendent in Idaho and as state superintendent of the schools of that state.

Dr. Winship thought the idea of carrying on a rural demonstration school, that is being conducted by the College here, a good one.

LINVILLE HOTEL BUS BADLY
DAMAGED BY FIREBlaze Discovered as Machine was on Way to Wabash Train Last Night

The bus of the Linville Hotel was badly damaged by fire shortly after 7 o'clock last night as it stood in Main street in front of the Maryville Motor Company. Frank Densmore had started to meet the Wabash train with the bus. He stopped at the Motor company and discovered that there was fire under the hood of the motor. Fire extinguishers were turned on the flames and an attempt was made to smother them with sacks, but no avail. After several minutes the city fire department arrived with the truck and within a quarter of a minute after the chemicals were turned on it was out.

The machine was insured. It was estimated today by the Nixsons at the hotel that the damage was about $200.

Happening, as it did, at a time of the evening when many people were on the street the fire attracted a large crowd.

WAS AN UNUSUAL
PICNIC AT GARRETTGIVEN BY STUDENTS FOR BOTH RURAL AND TOWN PEOPLE.

RURAL CLUB IN CHARGE

Program of Music, Talks and Reading
Given—Refreshments Served—
225 Present.

The Garrett School was the scene yesterday afternoon of one of the most unusual picnics that Nodaway County has seen. It was a picnic put on in a rural community by college students for a student organization and for children and grownup people of the community in which it was given.

The Garrett School is used as the demonstration school of the State Teachers College. It is here that the teachers and teachers to be, who are attending the College this summer, are allowed to go to observe the work that is carried on in a rural school under real rural conditions. The teacher is being furnished by the College and pupils from Garrett and two or three other districts nearby are attending. In addition to these a number are taken each day from Maryville to attend the school.

The organization putting on the picnic was the Rural Club of the College. Members and friends of the Chamber of Commerce furnished motor cars to transport the College students to the school. It is estimated that the total attendance at the picnic, including club members, persons from Maryville and those from the community, was 225.

The feature of the picnic was an out-of-doors program. The Garrett School grounds are nicely mown and the visitors sat about on the grass in the shade of some large maple trees. An orchestra consisting of Alice Wellington, Maude Kibbe, Stephen Lamar, Wilber Lamar, Harold Stafford, Ella Manchester, Ora Lee Sims, Margaret Dietz, and Floyd Harvey played.

Following the opening music Merle Sealeman, president of the Rural Club, took charge, calling on President Uel W. Lamkin, Dr. E. A. Winship of Boston, editor of the Journal of Education, and Miss Grace Shepherd for talks and on Prof. Harry A. Miller for some readings. The talks were all short and to the point. Professor Miller's readings were much enjoyed.

Prof. Bert Cooper passed typewriter sheets with songs on them throughout the crowd. At various times during the program the students set up with songs, landing the speakers. This singing was lead by the playing of a ukulele.

At the end of the program Mrs. L. E. White, assisted by Mrs. D. L. May, Miss Gladys Horton, Miss Edna Cravin, Merle Sealeman and Fred Keller, served ice cream and wafers, and a number of games were played, both young and old taking part others stood and talked.

During the games Ralph Marcell of the Marcell Studio took pictures of various groups.

The directors of the Garrett School, J. F. Suetterlin, R. M. New and C. L. Wells, were complimented at the meeting by different speakers for their attitude toward the work of the demonstration school. They have shown the best of co-operation. Members of the board say that they feel that the movement is a great thing for their school and that they are back of anything that will tend to make educational advantages better in their district. Miss Margaret Fraken, is teacher at the school.

The response to the Chamber of Commerce's call for motor cars was so good that there were more cars than were needed. Some of those who arrived at the College last did not have to take any one. Among those who furnished and offered to furnish cars were H. L. Raines, A. F. Frank, W. A. Berg, H. L. Haines, Diss & Irby, D. E. Hotchkiss, W. Stanfield, J. Price, Sr., W. A. Blagg, C. E. Wells, F. A. Bush, F. L. Curfman, Clarence Vogt, R. P. Hosmer, First National Bank, Chas. Holt, L. M. Eek, Ed F. Adams, Ellis Cook, Thomas Wadley, Paul Sanford, Dan R. Baker, Bert Cooper, Uel W. Lamkin, Geo. A. Pickens, W. W. Stilwell, W. W. Randall, J. R. Lowry, Geo. McMurry, John Mutz, Townsend Godey, Bill Willoughby, Geo. Pat Wright, E. C. Curfman, Joe Cohn, G. L. Wilfley, E. R. Pictures which were taken yesterday afternoon for College films included President and Mrs. Uel W. Lamkin leaving their home to go to the demonstration at the Garrett school. Dean George H. Colbert, W. A. Blagg and Dr. E. A. Winship, leaving for the demonstration.

Miss Grace M. Shepherd was pictured entering the College sedan and leaving for the Garrett school. The bus of teachers from the College who were going to the demonstration school for observation was taken.

The pictures show the co-operation between the Chamber of Commerce and the citizens in their efforts to afford cars for the visitors to make the trip.

Motion pictures were made at the Garrett school showing the speakers addressing the visitors, the folk dances given by the children of the Garrett school, playing games, leap frog and three deep, work done in student dances and vitalized agriculture and the student teachers engaged in a game of volleyball. FORD WRITES
ABOUT CON CONDELEGATIONS NOW APPEARING BEFORE COMMITTEES

COMMITTEE TO REPORT

Judiciary Recommendations About
Ready to Be Submitted to Convention.

Jefferson City, Mo., July 13, 1922—

To the Democrat-Forum—The Convention was greatly shocked by the first death among its members since assembly. It was especially so to me as he was one of my old time school teachers. He was a young man then and I was only a child. I remembered the name but had no recollection of the man. We had never met since those early days but each knew the other was a delegate and we sought out each other at once on the assembling of the Convention. Mr. Wilson was Chairman of the Committee on Printing, Supplies and Employees, and had charge of all the business of the Convention and was about the hardest worked man in the whole convention during the first weeks of the session. It seems too bad that just as he had gotten the Convention under good headway and could feel that he could slow up a little that he should be stricken down. He was sick only a few days and no one, not even himself, had any suspicion that he was in any danger. He was pre-eminently fitted for the work assigned him and took a deep interest in it. He will be greatly missed by his associates on that committee and by the whole Convention.

It was the expectation of the delegates that the Committees would be completing their work by this time and we would have some reports before the Convention. But the time of the committees has been taken up with hearings. Up to this time no one seemed to be much interested but now delegations are flocking here and asking for a hearing on this, that or the other.

Most of them are reformers of one kind or another and they all want something in the Constitution. I have been wondering if it is beneficial or detrimental to have these hearings. Delegation after delegation has come here to appear before the State Highway Commission. Every one of them was interested in some particular road or locality. Not one of them was taking the whole state into consideration and trying to help the commission in laying out a complete State-wide system and showing that the particular road they favored would fit into the proposed and the whole form a complete scheme of state highway improvement. They were interested in one road and wanted that regardless of the effect on the whole plan. Yet the commission got valuable information, no doubt, and the hearings may have been worth while. I have often thought Congress wasted a lot of time in hearings but am not sure that the time is all wasted if the members are governed solely by the information received and the reasons advanced in support of any proposition.

If they allow themselves to be influenced by personal considerations, by a desire to do the thing the delegation has asked just to please the delegation or some members of it and are not guided solely by the merits of the matter under consideration, then the hearings are a detriment, and not a benefit. Some of the delegations who have appeared before us have been very helpful and have shown reasons for certain contentions they were making that were very illuminating and instructive and one delegation succeeded in thoroughly convincing me that they ought not to have what they were asking for. I was in some doubt about it up to that time.

The judiciary committee has its report about ready. There is not much change from what I have indicated it would be. In its present form it is largely the work of Judge Culver of St. Joseph, a member of that committee. I am not a member of that committee but I am informed they have had some pretty warm sessions. The Judge has been compelled to omit some provisions from this bill because the committee would not approve them. I regret this very much as I think they would have been very helpful and

PROGRAM AND BOOTHS

Is to Raise Funds for Organization—
Second to Be Given—First Was last Year.

The Y. W. C. A. of the State Teachers College will put on at the College Thursday evening in connection with the weekly band concert a lawn fete. It will be held on the west side of the walk leading to the south entrance and directly south of the building. A platform will be erected and a program given from it.

About the platform booths will be erected in which ice cream, home made candy, soda pop will be sold.

In addition to the band concert a quartet will sing and Mrs. Allen Hinckley will give a solo. A violin solo will be given by Miss Flora Lee Sims and Miss Margaret Tool will appear in solo dance. A couple of other dances will be given by groups from the classes of the physical education department of the College.

The object of the fete is that of raising a fund for carrying on of the work of the Y. W. C. A. in the College. It is the second that has been given the first being last summer.

The fete last summer was announced as being an especially good one and it is said that the one this year will be equally as good. The committees are working hard to make it so.

The weekly band concerts are attracting large crowds and with this as an added attraction it is probable that many people will attend the lawn fete.

Clash Between Guardsmen and Strikers at Franklin Junction Early
This Morning.

Washington, July 15—Until the railway labor board at Chicago exhausts every effort to end the railroad strike will it confess itself beaten. The administration does not propose to be insistent on a peace move. While watching the board they are also preparing for emergencies such as holding the federal troops in readiness and sending inspectors of the general army to the scene of the Texas trouble.

The use of the federal troops in the rail strike is a colossal blunder says J. J. Noonan, member of executive council of railroad employees of the department of American Federation of Labor. He came to Washington from a Chicago conference. Federation officials said it would be irritant.

Chicago, July 15—Negotiations for a settlement of the railway strike are virtually deadlock. The strike enters the third week with no end of the walk-out in sight.

With conditions attributable to the strike becoming more serious the coming week might witness the crisis of the controversy.

Chairman Hooper of the labor board has continued efforts for adjustment. The peace parleys have not developed basis of agreement between shop men and carriers.

Boonville, Mo., July 15—The first intimation of clash between the guardsmen at Franklin Junction and the striking shopmen was early this morning when several shots were exchanged between the prowlers and soldiers. None were injured as far as is known.

Kansas City, July 15—L. K. Parshall, United States marshal, charged the federal officers are not being given the proper co-operation by the governor of the state and the city government. He cited Springfield, New Franklin and Slater as instances of alleged lack of co-operation by state administration.

Scranton, Pa., July 15—Police deputies of Lackawanna County were summoned to Carbondale in connection with the strike of railroad shopmen. A citizen shot by strikebreakers is seriously wounded.

Columbus, O., July 15—Responding to Governor Davis orders, three hundred guardsmen mobilized at the home stations ready for possible service in connection with the coal and rail strikes.

FRED MESSBARGER WRITES OF THE OZARK REGION

Widely Traveled Man Thinks It a Most Ideal Place to Spend a Vacation

The Democrat-Forum received yesterday from Fred Messbarger, who is spending his vacation in the Ozarks a letter regarding what a wonderful territory he is visiting.

Mr. Messbarger says that he has been in two-thirds of the states of the Union, has been a number of times in Canada and that he has visited England, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and Germany but thinks that the Ozark territory is one of the most wonderful that one might select in which to spend his vacation.

Mr. Messbarger writes as follows: "The region encompassed by the area of fourteen counties, which comprise the Ozarks Playground, is unsurpassed in scenic beauty and attractiveness. This true the mountains are not as massive as those found in other sections of the country but they are friendly mountains, mountains that may be climbed with little effort, mountains that are continuously green and shaped and carpeted with a soft velvety grass where one may carelessly lie and refresh himself after an enervating tramp.

"Slippery streams dash here and there from and into every portion of the region and with their cooling waters, not hard nor filled with alkaline contents, but soft and pure, they afford that which is most desired by vacationists, a healthful dip into their bubbling coolness, or casting of a hook in search of the wary, finny tribe.

"After a two weeks stay in this land of nature one feels that he has indeed enjoyed a real restful vacation. I highly recommend it to those who are planning their vacation."

HAY CHARGES REED BETRAYED PARTY IN 1920

ST. LOUIS LEADER ELOQUENTLY PLEADS FOR NOMINATION OF LONG TO U. S. SENATE.

DISCUSSES CAMPAIGN ISSUES

Declares Senator Stabbed Democracy's Leader in Back; Now, Unrepentant, Would Lead Forces.

St. Louis, Mo., July 15.—Charles M. Hay, of St. Louis, concluded his three-day tour of southeast Missouri with an address here today. As in previous talks, Hay devoted himself largely to the public record of Senator James A. Reed. He asserted Reed had employed the tactics of the jungle in his dealings with Woodrow Wilson, and charged him with betrayal of the Democratic party in Missouri and the nation.

Hay pledged his steadfast support to Breckinridge Long, who is opposing Reed for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, subject to the State-wide primary election on August 1. Long, he said, represents a positive, constructive force, promising great usefulness to his constituents, if sent to Washington, while Reed's record is an unrelenting trail of criticism, obstruction and opposition.

Hay's speech was filled with eloquent passages, which aroused his hearers to great enthusiasm. His tributes to the Missouri farmer, to the service men and to Woodrow Wilson were especially noteworthy. He spoke, in part, as follows:

Reed's Record Reviewed.

"Reed has ability; talent—but can that talent be trusted? What is the answer of his senatorial career?"

"He entered the senate in 1910 with these words still ringing in the ears of his constituents: 'I have never given aid or comfort to the enemy. I have not claimed to be wiser than the combined wisdom of my party as expressed in its platform regularly adopted.'"

"Have his acts squared with his words?" "Let his record before the war, during the war and since the war, answer."

"In 1912 a Democratic administration came into power. With a fidelity and vision unsurpassed in our history it set itself to the accomplishment of long-deferred reforms."

"What was the contribution of James A. Reed to his party and his country during that period?" "Criticism, obstruction, opposition."

"In 1914 the President recommended certain needed changes in the Interstate Commerce Commission law. Reed opposed the measure. In the same year the President proposed amendments to the anti-trust laws. Reed opposed the measure after it had been agreed upon in conference."

"The Federal Reserve Bank Act, he, at first, attacked with a ferocity that brought consternation to its friends. He seemed determined to defeat it. Finding that impossible, and yielding for once to party pressure, he was, to use the language of Carter Glass of Virginia, 'finally whipped into line.' But to accomplish this a personal appeal of the great President, who was laying out his very life for the measure, was necessary. It was then that he wrote the letter which eight years later Reed has the temerity to submit as his certificate of character as a Democrat and public servant."

Record in War Time.

"So reads his record before the war. War came. What was Reed's contribution to his party and his country during the war? Again the record answers—criticism, obstruction, opposition. He voted for the war. But he opposed the measures necessary to win the war. With his nation at war, practically without an army, he opposed the service act, designed to secure an army and secure it on the Jeffersonian principle that 'all men are created equal.'"

With an army called for, which had to be fed, he opposed the food control act, designed to secure food and secure it on fair and equitable terms. If he had voted against the war, he could not have pleased the Kaiser more."

"But, thank God, he didn't have his way. He didn't ham-string America or enable Germany to win. The forces of constructive statesmanship couldn't whip him in line, but they bashed him aside and marched on. Not only the statesmen from Missouri, but the boys from Missouri marched on. They answered their country's call with a dare, they sailed the seas with a song, they went over the top with a smile. They marched on through blood and fire, on the front, till that November morning when beneath the stars of their God and their country, they stood triumphant over the broken remnants of German autocracy. Of them and their record, we're proud. We're proud of the record made by fathers and mothers, wives and daughters who stayed at home and worked and saved, prayed and sacrificed that these boys might be fed and clothed, armed and munitioned, and that America might win the war. The paths of Missouri's young manhood run from homes to dug outs, and from the furrows of the farm to the trenches of the battle front. These paths are lit by the altar fires of sacrifice and patriotism. Would God those were the only ones made by Missourians. But winding amidst them like the tortuous, slimy trail of the hissing serpent is the path made by the senior senator from Missouri."

"But we didn't follow him. He made that slimy trail alone. It is my faith that we won't crawl in it now. We will set up but one stone to mark it which will bear this superscription: 'Erected in honor of Missouri Democrats who repudiated the man that made these tracks.'"

Hoover Not An Issue.

"With the odor of that trail about him, this man of boasted courage comes to Missouri. But as he looks back on his war record, he hasn't the nerve to submit to Missouri Democrats for their approval or disapproval. Instead of that, he seeks to divert attention to the record of another man—as if he were a candidate against him. Instead of defending his own record, he denounces the alleged record of Herbert Hoover. But let Mr. Reed understand. The gentleman whose record we're interested in is not named Herbert Hoover, but James A. Reed. We do not care, just now, who Hoover is, or what he is or was. If he is a devil, that doesn't make Jim Reed a saint. Reed can't put wings on himself by putting horns and hoofs on Hoover."

"But by his discussion of Hoover, Reed has only added to his own dishonor, for he has deliberately falsified about Hoover and attempted to deceive you, his own constituents. He tells you that Hoover fixed the price of wheat. That's not true. A commission of twelve men, six representing the farming industry, fixed it, and Hoover had nothing to do with it."

"He says that Hoover fixed the price under the then market prices, and that as soon as his control ended the price advanced. That's not true. On the day the price was fixed at $2.20 per bushel, the market price ranged from $2.10 to $2.26 per bushel. On the day the food control period expired, June 1, 1920, the price of cash wheat on the Chicago market was $2.75. On July 15, when speculation in futures was resumed, it was $2.84. On July 31, it was $2.45. On August 15 it was $2.53; on September 1, $2.58; on September 15, $2.66; on September 30, $2.45; on November 1, $2.16, and on December 1, $1.86."

"We find, therefore, that within six months after food control ended, the price had declined 80c per bushel. What is the price now? What has it been since? By what rule, therefore, can it be calculated that Hoover deprived the American farmers of a billion dollars? By the token of the actual figures, I say that if Hoover was responsible for the prices farmers enjoyed in war times, the daily prayer of the American farmers now should be: 'Oh, Lord, give us more of Hoover and less of Harding.'"

Tribute to the Farmer.

"But Reed says Hoover kept the American farmer from getting perhaps $10 per bushel for his wheat. If he means by that to charge that the American farmer complains because he didn't get $10 per bushel, I resent it as a slander of the American farmer. I was born and reared on a farm. My father and mother sleep in the country graveyard hard by the farm their hands had cleared and tilled, and on which they lived and loved and died. My kinsmen are farmers. I own a farm myself. And I think I know something of the loyalty and patriotism of the American farmer. I have seen him as he wooed and won and loved and lost. I have seen him as, with radiant eyes, he stood by the newborn babe, and again as he dropped the last tear on the new-made grave. I have seen him at dawn go whistling afield to wring from Mother Earth a sustenance for his flock and a contribution to the hungry of the world. I have seen him at the end of the day as he gathered his family about him to invoke the guidance and protection of a beneficent God. I have seen him through the eyes of the barefoot country school boy. I saw him yonder at Lexington as embattled he 'fired the shot heard around the world.' I saw him by the flickering fires of Valley Forge as he knelt in the snow by his Washington. I saw him with Daniel Boone on the wild frontier blazing the paths of civilization."

"I saw him at Gettysburg as, led by his Mead or Lee, he died without a murmur for the cause he loved. I saw him at Appomattox turn south, all lost save honor, to build again amid the ashes of his hopes, or turn north to discharge the stern tasks of peace with the same courage he exemplified in war. I have seen him since in times of peace, felling the forests, draining the swamps, carpeting hills and valleys with velvet and with gold—and all by honest toil. I saw him without a murmur send forth his sons to do and dare and die for the democracy he loves."

"And having so seen and so known him, I resent the imputation of James A. Reed that the American farmer in Missouri wanted $10 per bushel for his wheat in time of war, as a base and infamous slander."

Seeks Peace With Veterans.

"In this belated hour, he tries to make peace with the service men by a mock concern for their welfare. He opposed the measure designed to insure them bread in wartime, but he wants to give them a bonus now. But it will be observed that he wants his bonus first. While the bonus bill waits in Washington, he campaigns for re-nomination in Missouri. Breckinridge Long was for bread then and is for a bonus now. I would rather trust him to keep up the fight for a bonus than the man who jeopardized the soldiers' bread in time of war."

"Such is Reed's record on war. 'The war ended. The problems of peace arise. What contribution to their solution was made by James A. Reed? Again the record answers: Criticism, obstruction, opposition.'"

"With the end of the war, arose a cry from all the world for some plan to preserve peace. In answer to that yearning of mankind, the peace conference prepared the covenant of the League of Nations. By unanimous vote they adopted it, and submitted it to the nations. It was submitted to our country by the great man who led in framing it. He urged the senate to accept it, not as a perfect plan, but as the best then obtainable. The majority of his party and great leaders of the opposing party approved it. Citizens everywhere—Democrats in overwhelming numbers, called upon their representatives to ratify the treaty."

"What was the record of James A. Reed? Criticism, obstruction, opposition. He opposed it. He attacked the good faith and patriotism of the President for advising its ratification. He not only fought the treaty, but he fought it unfairly. He didn't state the facts. He deliberately misstated them. He didn't fight it honestly. He deliberately misconstrued the plain terms of the covenant. He resorted to base sophistry and demagoguery to deceive the people. He stooped to coarse appeals to passion and prejudice to inflame the people against the treaty and the treaty's supporters."

"Vilification of Wilson. 'The cruel fact is that this man, who in 1910 boasted that he had never stabbed his party's leaders in the back, not only denounced the President's proposal, but vilified him personally. Not only in the senate, but from one end of the country to the other, he attacked him with the coarseness of the gutter and the ferocity of the jungle. The attacks began as the President took his seat at the conference table, continued as the President, single-handed and alone, battled for justice and democracy against old world diplomats, increased in ferocity as he returned to his native shores with the great document in his hand, raged unabated as the President pleading for the great cause, paled and trembled, and fell; pursued him to the sick-chamber and there with eager, savage eyes kept watch with Death itself.'"

"At Salisbury, Mo., he referred to the President as a 'long-eared animal that goes braying about the country.' When confronted by that statement in this campaign, he at first denied it. When men of unimpeachable veracity swore that he made it, he admitted it, and then, he says (mark his words) immediately withdrew it. In other words, he stabbed the President in the back and immediately drew the dagger out. Would God that the daggers thrust in the back of Woodrow Wilson could be withdrawn! But they stabbed him; they let his blood; they weakened him; they broke his nerve. They broke his heart. They, for the time, defeated his plan for his country and humankind. And now called to answer for their crimes, they hold up their bloody hands and whine—'Forgive, forgive; I pulled the dagger out as soon as I stuck it in.'"

"During Reed's bitter fight on the peace treaty, individual Democrats, organizations of Democrats, the Democratic state committee, Democratic members of the Missouri General Assembly appealed to him to support it. To each and all his answer was that the Democratic party had never made a platform declaration on the treaty and that he was answerable only to a regularly constituted Democratic convention."

"In April, 1920, a regularly constituted convention met at Joplin. The delegates were selected with an eye single to the approval or disapproval of the league covenant and of Reed's attitude thereon. The convention by an overwhelming vote declared in favor of the treaty. But the combined wisdom of the Democracy of his state as declared in a platform regularly adopted, did not move him then as it moved him in 1910. In defiance of the platform, he asked an election as a district delegate to the national convention that he might there belie the platform of his party. By a vote of 1,070 to 429, his impudent request was denied. Traveled to San Francisco."

"Did he bow to the will of his party? No. He trailed out to San Francisco. In defiance of the will of his state's convention, he asked the credentials committee for a seat in the national convention. They denied his request. Still defiant, he caused his fight to be carried to the floor of the convention. By an overwhelming vote he was rejected and repudiated. Not only so. The convention by a platform regularly and by overwhelming vote adopted, declared in favor of the peace treaty, including the league covenant. What then? Did Reed accept the 'combined wisdom of my party?'"

"In 1910, he said: 'I stand on the Democratic platform. I never left it and never found it difficult to keep my equilibrium upon it.' On his return from San Francisco, did he stand on his party's platform? Did he keep his equilibrium on it? No. He never got on it at all. He says the state committee ruled him off. They couldn't roll him on. He hired a hall in Kansas City, stood on his own platform; denounced his party's platform and nominees, then hurried away to Wisconsin to speak for an Independent Republican candidate for United States senator. He says he was trying to help the Democratic nominee. I wonder what he told the Republican candidate at the time."

"He Betrayed the Party." "He betrayed the party. He stabbed its leaders in the back. Just as he said to David R. Francis in 1906, we say to him now, 'We are opposed to turning control of the Democratic party to men who stabbed our leaders and our organization in the back.'"

"So runs his record before the war, during the war, and since the war. From beginning to end it is the same story—criticism, obstruction, opposition."

"He asks us to repudiate the Joplin Jefferson City and San Francisco platforms, regularly adopted by Democratic conventions, and write a platform to his liking. He asks that we repudiate the outstanding achievements of the Wilson administration repudiate the campaign of James E. Cox and Franklin Roosevelt, that we repudiate our own votes cast in 1920."

Tribute to Long.

"I never knew Breckinridge Long until I removed from Callaway County to St. Louis nine years ago. I knew him as a lawyer, a citizen and a Democrat before he became known throughout Missouri and the entire country. As a lawyer he was sound in judgment, unimpeachable in integrity; faithful to his clients and fair to his adversaries."

"As a Democrat he was active, consistent and persistent in the support of the party's leaders and policies. He was liberal with his time, energy and money. He did not make as much noise as some others, but his work was unusually effective."

"Mr. Long was born in old Missouri. He lived in this state for over thirty years before announcing as a candidate for any office. He has been from boyhood a perennial worker for the Democratic party, but not a perennial candidate. He did not arrive in Missouri from a Republican state one day and begin running for office the next. In my humble opinion, if he were defeated for a nomination, he would not sulk in his tent. If he could not have his way on a matter of policy, I believe he would play the game like a loyal Democrat, and not hire a hall to vent his spleen on his party, and then hurry off to another state and make speeches for a Republican candidate."

"Two years ago, when I was a candidate against Long, I watched him with all the eagerness and solicitude with which one candidate observes another. I said at the close of that campaign what I am gratified to say now, namely: that while he prosecuted his campaign with vigor, he was at all times and under all circumstances fair and honorable."

No Newberryism by Long.

"It was charged that his wife had money, and it was predicted by many of my friends and the friends of other candidates that Long would make lavish use of his wife's money to secure the nomination. I presume his wife has considerable money. If so, she is fortunate, and so is he. I wish mine had. But if Breckinridge Long used a single dollar in the last campaign to corrupt a single voter, I never heard of it. While he may have spent considerable money, he in no sense attempted to Newberryize the state."

"He proved a popular leader in the general election, running some 10,000 votes ahead of his ticket; this notwithstanding the fact that the man who today has the effrontery to ask the party to nominate him sought by direction and indirectness to encourage his friends to scratch Long."

"Long's record as a public servant is known to all. During the last Democratic administration he was assistant secretary of state. His duties were manifold; his responsibilities great. In a time of international discord and hate it was his task to make friends for his country. It has been asserted that his chief function was to entertain representatives of foreign countries. That was one of his duties, and he did it to his honor, he entertained in such a way as to send the representatives home with a deeper friendship for America and Americans. While Breckinridge Long was devoting his time, talent and means to the entertainment of America's friends, his opponent in this race was prostituting his talents to the delight and comfort of America's enemies."

"With the taint of that course still upon him, he now attempts with ridicule and sarcasm to belittle Long's services. He says, forsooth, that Long's chief function was carrying alligator grips for foreign diplomats. That doubtless is a minor role, but frankly I would rather carry alligator grips for the friends and guests of my country than by word and act to lend aid and comfort to my country's enemies."

Cocktails and Poison.

"He says Long mixed cocktails for effete English dukes. Maybe so, but he never mixed any poison in the cup of the president of his country in time of war."

"He says gain, that Long lived and entertained at great expense in a mansion at Washington. That may be so, but so far as I have learned, his entertaining, whether of foreign diplomats or American citizens, was in furtherance of his country's cause in peace and in war."

"Reed says that for entertainment purposes, Long has in his cellar or cellars a liberal supply of Old Lynch Rye and other once familiar brands. Personally, I do not know and so far as this race is concerned, I do not care whether that charge is true or false. Whether Breckinridge Long is as wet as a fish or as dry as a camel, I am for him."

"If he be wet, he is a 'wet' Democrat, and as between a 'wet' Democrat and a 'wet' Republican masquerading as a Democrat, I am for the 'wet' Democrat."

"The issue in this race is not whether Breckinridge Long is wet or dry. The issue is this: Is James A. Reed faithful or unfaithful to the Democratic party and the immortal principles for which that party has stood and stands today? I am a 'dry' always have been, and always will be, but Reed can not becloud the issue in my mind or in the minds of other 'dry' Democrats by this discussion of any issue other than his own miserable record."

"So runs his record before the war, during the war, and since the war. From beginning to end it is the same story—criticism, obstruction, opposition."

NODAWAY CO. SHEEP HAVE FEW WORMS

THIS CONCLUSION DRAWN BY WADDELL AND KINNAIRD

DRENCH AS TREATMENT

Copper Sulphate or Blue Vitrol Dissolved in Water Will Kill the Parasites

that the sheep flocks of Nodaway County are comparatively free from worms is the conclusion which is drawn by Roy A. Kinnaird county farm agent and R. L. Waddell, sheep specialist from the agriculture extension division of the University of Missouri, who have spent the past week with the sheep breeders in the different parts of the county."

The first part of the schedule made for the county was not filled this week because of the heavy rains. Beginning Wednesday afternoon the schedule was completed for the remainder of the week. The largest attendance was at the Wednesday afternoon meeting at Subny Brook when about fifteen men were present."

Mr. Waddell complimented the flocks which he saw and said that many were unusually well bred and in splendid condition."

The method which he explained for the eradication of stomach worms was to drench with a solution of copper sulphate or blue vitrol. The solution is made by dissolving two ounces of pure crystals of copper sulphate in a pint of hot water which is then diluted to the proper strength by adding a gallon of cold water."

It is dangerous to administer this remedy with the ordinary drenching bottle because if the sheep get strangled on this solution it will kill them. On that account a rubber tube is inserted down the throat to the stomach and the solution poured through a funnel into the tube."

The accurate dose for lambs is: three-fourths of an ounce for lambs three months old; an ounce and a half for lambs six months old; two ounces and a half for lambs twelve months old, and three ounces and a half for full grown sheep."

One dose of this solution is usually sufficient but where the breeder is forced to raise sheep on the same pasture year after year it is found to be profitable to treat the sheep once a month."

The worm eggs are hatched on the ground and the rains spatter them onto the grass where they are eaten by the sheep. Where the grass is long there is not much danger but where it is short and the sheep eat close to the ground there is much danger."

The Missouri Extension Circular

number 87 explains this process fully and may be obtained free of cost from the Agriculture Extension Service University of Missouri, Columbia.

Mr. Waddell left last night for Columbia. The schedule for the week was only about half carried out and the meeting that were held were not very well attended, on account of the fact that roads were in a bad condition and that many of the farmers were busy repairing their fences that had been swept away by the high waters early in the week."

Along with the sad sights of a flood or fire there usually appears in some way or other some amusing incident and so it happened in the recent flood on the Wilson Farm near the Honey Creek bridge. Mr. Wilson had used a drag to go over his listed corn, and when done, had left it in the field. The water washed it down stream and under the bridge, and in the iron seat of the drag sat a 'possum as contented as comfortable as one might wish to see and the last seen of Mr. Possum he was calling on.

S. T. C. STUDENTS TO HAVE GUIDANCE

ADVISORS TO HELP THEM TO PROPER COURSES

WOULD PREVENT MISFITS

C. E. Partch to Have Charge of Work for Men—Women to be Announced Later.

The State Teachers College is to have, beginning with the fall term, vocational guidance for both the men and women students. C. E. Partch, now attending Harvard University, has been employed to have charge of this work for the men. Announcement will be made later as to who is to have charge of this work for the women.

Uel W. Lamkin, president of the College, says that the work in vocational guidance is for the purpose of getting the student into the kind of work for which he is best fitted. Each man at the College will have at least one conference with Mr. Partch during each term. Mr. Partch is an expert on this line. He makes a study of the student and is able to determine from his make up whether or not he is fitted for the kind of work that he is planning to do. If Mr. Partch does not believe that he is fitted to teach a certain thing or to do the other work planned he will tell him so and advise what kind of work he thinks he will do best in and how to prepare himself for this work.

It is held that such a method carried out in all the schools of the country would prevent a great many misfits in the professions of the world. Some of the large manufacturing concerns have in the past few years paid high salaries to experts along this line for spending their time observing the workers in the plant, picking out the misfits and helping them to get into the line of the work at which they can become most efficient.

The woman to have charge of vocational guidance for the girls will carry out the same plan that Mr. Partch carries on with the men.

Mr. Partch will have some classes in shop work at the College.

FAMILY FORCED TO ABANDON THEIR HOME

The Barnard Bulletin this week tells of the narrow escape of the Patton family as follows:

Ed Patton and family were forced to abandon their home on White Cloud River Sunday night at 2 o'clock, when the river raised from the heavy rains of Sunday afternoon and night to the highest stage it has been known for several years, there being four foot of water on the first floor of the Patton house when at the highest. Mrs. Patton and the children were taken to the Harry Hunt home while Mr. Patton, assisted by Glenn Baker, Dale King, Harry Hunt and "Short" Campbell, took the stock to higher ground, placing the chickens in the upper story of the house. When this was accomplished the water was too high for them to get out and they were shut in the upper story for several hours. While there a large log was swept against the house breaking the porch posts away. They feared the house would be taken at any moment.

Black and white organdie popular for older ladies

Paris, July 15.—Black and white organdie is the very smart material for the older woman when she goes forth to a tea on one of these warm afternoons. When all's said there is nothing more chic than black and white organdie this season seems to be the ideal expression of the vogue for these colors. All over designs of embroidery in black spirals that meander hither and you are favorites. For younger women there is a wonderful shade of blue, such as that which glorifies Chinese porcelain. There is likewise a quaint blending of apricot and peachblow pink.

It is on the Parisienne that the black crepe de chine tailleur reaches perfection. She has not made the mistake of gowning herself in a simple, long line suit of this soft material and letting it go at that. Wisely she has added the necessary touch of ruffles and a gay waist coat. The ruffles are like something out of the Directoire period, often of burnt ivory net or lace, and plentifully employed not only down the front of the blouse but also inside the cuffs of coat sleeves. The waist coats are copied from those worn by the Louis XVI. Beau d'Snuff colored silk or satin sprinkled with tiny flowers in blue, pink or yellow.—Kansas City Journal.

IRWIN SWEARINGEN ESCAPES FROM STATE PENITENTIARY

Had Taken Prominent Part in Prison Athletics and Gets Away While Training in the Evening

Irwin Swearingen who escaped once from the county jail here and was recaptured and sentenced to seven years to the penitentiary is missing from that state institution. The following is a dispatch from Jefferson City:

Before his incarceration in the penitentiary Irwin Swearingen, sent from Nodaway County for seven years was a professional sprinter. He has been taking a prominent part in prison athletics and desired permission to train in the late evening hours on the cinder track in the prison playground.

This was readily accorded him, as he had a good record, and he desired to be in readiness for athletic contests to be held to day. Wednesday evening he began his training. He trotted around the track in the gloaming and after darkness came he was seen no more. Whether he went over the wall and continued his training by putting as much distance between himself and the prison as possible or whether he is "hiding out" inside, awaiting an opportunity to get outside, is not known by the prison officials, who are conducting a search for the missing man.

At any rate he is missing and when he returns will probably lose his place as a member of the prison athletic team.

Swearingen was sent to the penitentiary when he pleaded guilty to stealing an automobile from Manchester & Dodds and automobile casings from G. O. Riley of Skidmore. This was at the September term of circuit court last year.

Swearingen has a number of escapes from jails and also one from the penitentiary to his credit. He got out of the Worth County jail twice and also escaped from the penitentiary a few years ago. While confined in the Nodaway County jail he escaped and was captured about a week later. The other time he escaped he was gone about a year and was caught at Minot, N. D., where Deputy Sheriff L. E. Atherton was sent to bring him home.

He made boasts a number of times to the authorities here about how he was going to get away.

There were from 12 to 20 inches of rain here Sunday night and Monday the high water washed out about 300 feet of railroad track, just north of town. At an early age she united with the Christian Church but for convenience she transferred her membership to the Presbyterian Church of which she was a member at the time of her death. would have saved the people a lot of money.

The more elections, the more offices, the more governmental and judicial machinery we have the more expense and the more work for shyster lawyers and worse than shyster politicians. But whenever an attempt is made to simplify the machinery of government and do away with a lot of useless and expensive offices, these same lawyers and politicians begin to howl about the rights of the people and the ability of the people to govern themselves and all the rest of that familiar demagoguery. And the most surprising thing of all is that they are able to get away with it so many times, when the fallacy of their pretensions and the hypocrisy of their professions ought to be patent to everyone.

Every farmer and every man who has anything to do with machinery of any kind knows that the desire of every one to make a machine that is just as simple and composed of just as few parts as possible. Why men who are at all qualified to sit in a constitutional convention cannot appreciate the fact that the people out over the state will understand that a governmental machine ought to be constructed on the same plan, that it ought to be as simple and composed of as few parts as possible, is beyond me. I have enough faith in the people to believe that if we can simplify the machine a little and make one office do the work that three or four are doing now that it will meet with approval, even if we do eliminate some offices that have been a part of the state governmental machinery for more than one hundred years. We have not given up as there is still a fighting chance.

Perhaps I will be permitted to go outside the record and speak of the state highway commission again. Their report has set Jefferson City and southeast Missouri on fire. Jefferson City had expected the road between Kansas City and St. Louis to follow the line of the Capitol Highway which passes through Warrensburg, Sedalia and Jefferson City and on east and the south side of the river and the people are sure up in arms. They are calling the members of the commission every thing they can think of and then adding a blanket clause to include the things they may think of hereafter. The commission will hold meetings next week to hear protests against their report and there will sure be a hot time in the old town. Other parts of the state are also loud in their protestations, but as I have heard no out bursts from up about Maryville, I am not expecting to see a delegation of irate citizens from the old home town parading the streets of the Capitol City next week.

FEARS WERE ENTERTAINED AS TO THEIR SAFETY

The Albany Capital this week had the following.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Seckington from Maryville, and some friends from St. Joseph, had been camping on the river back of the Ted Fore farm, in north of Gentryville. Monday the lines were out; it was unable to reach the Fore place, and as the day wore on and no report could be had from the campers, fears were entertained as to their safety. Late in the evening parties from Albany drove to the Homer Robertson place, about three quarters of a mile from the Fore land, and were relieved to learn that the Seckingtons and their friends were safe. Cooper Sampson and "Cruse" Ireland had been with them, and when they heard the waters roaring down Grand river early Monday morning, they had promptly piloted the campers to the high ground in the yard at the Fore place, so that they were safe. Mr. and Mrs. Seckington drove out late Tuesday evening and continued their journey home yesterday.
